

EQUILIBRIA

About the Publication

Equilibria: Duke Economics Review, is an annual undergraduate economics journal published by the Economics Students Union at Duke University. We publish a selection of outstanding academic literature written by undergraduates in all disciplines relevant to the social sciences and business (economics, finance, statistics, corporate law, public policy, business ethics, marketing, etc). The submission deadline is January 15th, and our issues are published every Spring semester.

We aim to open up opportunities for undergraduates to publish and read academic research, while also providing individuals to have their work recognized by a premier research university publication. We accept a variety of topics and papers, from technical statistics analyses to opinion pieces on the current economy.

Submission Requirements

Equilibria accepts exceptional papers by all individuals, with emphasis on undergraduate research of high caliber.

Submit your work by e-mailing it to dukeeconreview@gmail.com by the deadline of January 15th.

Papers should be:

1. Chicago style and citation format
2. 10-15 pages long (recommended, but length may vary)
3. 12-point, Times New Roman, double-spaced
4. Microsoft word files (.docx, .doc)
5. With full bibliography in Chicago style

Your submission email should include:

1. Author's full name and university/universities of attendance
2. Any acknowledgements relevant to the paper
3. High-resolution, electronic files of any graphics, charts, or formulae (.jpg, .png, .TIFF).

Please note that you cannot submit work that is already published in any other publication. By submitting, you give Equilibria the right to publish your work and make stylistic edits to your paper.

Selection and Publication

Submitted papers go through a rigorous review and editing process. Selection criteria are based on the strength of analysis and originality in argument. For example of past publications, please visit our website at
